What Is That Smell

Moldy food smells bad, and so do dirty, sweaty feet. But, the foul odor that may greet someone walking into a busy restroom can make those two odors smell like a springtime rose. The bad smell found in restrooms can be caused by a number of different things. However, the two constant culprits usually behind the odors are organic matter and bacteria. We need to eliminate both to solve the problem. We need to clean, and we need to disinfect.

There are several products that can tackle these culprits and leave your busy restroom appealing. An enzymatic cleaner can digest and clean the organic sources causing the malodor. Some hydrogen peroxide cleaners can oxidize and eradicate organic matter and then eliminate much of the bacteria. After cleaning, use an approved disinfectant according to label instructions to kill any residual bacteria on your floor or other surfaces.

Effective bowl cleaners clean, disinfect and fight the smells bacteria leave behind in toilet bowls and urinals. Drain cleaners can eliminate odors that reside not in the restroom but under it. These can come back-in to haunt your restroom.

Once the malodors are gone, a reliable air freshener can leave an inviting, pleasant scent in the restroom. It should have a gentle, soft scent not an overwhelming perfume smell. Here at Great Western, we stock a large selection of all of these types of products to keep your restrooms in first-class condition.
